Main collection

Collection of Japanese Old Photographs in Bakumatsu-Meiji Period

This collection contains about 7,700 original photographs taken in various places in Japan between 1860 and 1899 by Hikoma Ueno, Felice Beato, and other photographers. "Bauduin Collection" obtained from Netherlands in November 2007 was designated as a registered tangible cultural property of Japan in July 2009, under the name of "Bauduin Photograph Collection".

Central Library

"Umegasaki Western-style houses and Dejima"

"Megane Bridge"

"Offerings for moon viewing"

"Young Thomas Glover"

Glover Atlas: Fishes of Southern and Western Japan

This collection is comprised of 32 series containing 806 colored pictures of about 600 species of fish landed at fish markets in Nagasaki. Thomas Albert Glover (Japanese name: Tomisaburo Kuraba), the second son of Thomas Blake Glover and a British merchant in the Bakumatsu Period, had five local painters draw sketches of fishes between the late Meiji Period and the early Showa Period.

"Japanese bigeye"

"Demon stinger"

"Gold-ribbon grouper"

"Fan lobster"

German Education History Collection

This collection contains educational books and documents, mainly those of the first edition, published in the Kingdom of Prussia (Germany) between 1750 and 1870. The collection is comprised of two parts (First Part: A total of 221 documents including books of famous educational thinkers and documents related to the educational system at the time; Second Part: 91 practical documents used in the field of education at the time).

Japanese and Dutch Collection

In addition to about 1,800 books written in Dutch, this collection contains Japanese and English books on the relationship between Japan and Netherlands, and documents (including microfilms) related to Dutch trading house. With the dissolution of the Japan-Netherlands Academic Society in 2012, materials collected by the society were donated.

Materials Related to Modern Medicine History

The materials include "Paper anatomical model (Kunst lijk (human phantom))" used by Pompe van Meerdervoort, the father of Western medicine in Japan, at his anatomical lecture; "Koigekasoden (surgery textbook)" written by Chinzan Narabayashi, the first head of the Narabayashi Family and an officer in charge of interpretation for trade with Netherlands; the Japan's oldest "Stethoscope" introduced by Otto G.J. Mohnike, the father of vaccination against cowpox; "Sekotsugen", a wall scroll providing the osteopathic method; more than 100 handwritten lecture transcripts in the Meiji Period; and other materials related to medical history. In 2011, 577 materials collected by Hosaku Sato, a graduate of Nagasaki Medical University, were donated from his descendant (Hosaku Sato Collection).

Medical Library

"Stethoscope"

"Kaitai Shinsho (anatomic book)"

"Koigekasoden (surgery textbook)"

"Kunst lijk (human phantom)"

Muto Collection

This collection contains about 10,000 Japanese and Western books, journals, and booklets as well as about 200 documents collected and stored by Chozo Muto, a professor of former Nagasaki Higher Commercial School. The collection also contains a wide range of rare books and paintings related to Japan-Netherlands trade and Japan-UK trade, Nagasaki in the Bakumatsu Period, and economic classics, etc.

Economics Library

"Wealth of Nations (first edition)"

"Map of Nagasaki Dejima drawn by Keiga Kawahara"

"Blue and white plate with VOC mark"

"A memorial picture taken when Ryunosuke Akutagawa and Kan Kikuchi visited Nagasaki"

Digital collection

Collections of Nagasaki University, such as old photographs, materials related to modern medicine history, and materials of Muto Collection, etc., are available online.
