Handwritten Japanese text in cursive (sōsho) style, spanning two pages. The text is densely written with frequent red ink annotations (kuzushiji) interspersed throughout the black ink characters. The right page contains approximately 15 lines of text, while the left page contains approximately 18 lines. The handwriting is fluid and characteristic of Edo-period documents. The red ink is used for emphasis, corrections, or specific terminology. The paper shows signs of age, including slight discoloration and wear at the edges.
